Renée Lyons holds the first Bridgepoint Chair in Complex Chronic Disease (University of Toronto and Bridgepoint Health) and is Scientific Director of the Collaboratory for Research and Innovation, Bridgepoint Health. She is a Professor in the Dalla Lana School of Public Health and the Institute for Health Policy, Management and Evaluation in the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto. Dr. Lyons has been a faculty member at Dalhousie University since 1981 where she held a Tier 1 Canada Research Chair in Health Promotion and was the Senior Scientist at the Atlantic Health Promotion Research Centre (www.ahprc.dal.ca), with appointments in the School of Health and Human Performance and the Department of Psychology. She is a member of Health Canada/Public Health Agency of Canada Science Advisory Board, a Fellow of the Canadian Academy of Health Sciences, and a Board member of the Science Research and Demonstration Corporation, and the national research network of Children and Youth in Challenging Contexts.

The goal of the Bridgepoint Chair in Complex Chronic Disease (CCD) Research is the development of a leading-edge research program in CCD and using multi-institutional collaborations on CCD research development and its use. The Bridgepoint Collaboratory for Research and Innovation has been in operation since late 2009. Its focus is health systems re-engineering for people with complex multiple health conditions around three integrated research themes: service and policy, clinical excellence, and technology and design solutions. The Collaboratory engages in training and mentoring of CCD scientists and students, development of new research methods, grants development, and knowledge mobilization. The Collaboratory has also developed a governance structure and committees, inter-disciplinary, inter-sectoral collaborations to advance research, donations and grants of approximately $3 million, and mechanisms to help use the research findings at Bridgepoint and elsewhere. Research proposals totaling over $5 million will have been submitted for funding this year.

In addition to her responsibilities at the Bridgepoint Collaboratory, Dr. Lyons is currently involved with the Oxford International Learning Collaborative, focused on evidence development and use in the fundamentals of health service. She is also completing a 5-year nationally funded (CIHR, Heart and Stroke Foundation) multi-method study on optimizing policy investments in the built environment to address youth obesity, comparing rural, urban and suburban communities and socioeconomic status.

Dr. Lyons' research has focused on chronic disease, health systems improvement and knowledge translation. She was co-editor for the first book on multiple chronic conditions, When people live with multiple chronic diseases: a collaborative approach to an emerging global challenge (Escuela Andaluza de Salud Publica, 2010). A book chapter on the Future of chronic illness: translating what we know into what we do in Translating chronic illness into practice (Wiley-Blackwell, 2010) examines how we should use evidence to take bolder country-wide and global action on chronic illness prevention and management.

Dr. Lyons has been principal investigator for over $25M in health research funding for large health research projects in rural health, stroke and health systems reform, public health, oral health of seniors, and chronic disease prevention in midlife and youth, settings and health, and human relationships and chronic illness. These funds were awarded primarily through national peer review research competitions. She has conducted research and published in knowledge translation (KT), including work with several Canadian Networks of Centres of Excellence (e.g. Stroke, Water) on KT development.

Dr. Lyons was Special Advisor to Alan Bernstein, President of CIHR, providing research development leadership in rural and northern health. She also collaborated with over 100 researchers in the social sciences and humanities (SS/H) to develop a document explaining health related disciplines in SS/H and advances in social and behavioral research to facilitate cross-pillar collaboration.

She was a member of the Canadian Academy of Health Science's review panel on chronic disease in Canada (2009-10). Dr. Lyons provided research expertise and training to guide public health development in the Balkans and was a member of the Michael Smith Foundation expert advisory group for the evaluation of the BC ACT NOW initiative.

In 2009, Dr. Lyons was a visiting scholar in Green Templeton College, University of Oxford, and hosted a Knowledge Translation Symposium with Alastair Buchan, Oxford's Head of Medical Sciences. The symposium presenters collaborated on a monograph (www.ahprc.dal.ca) about innovative approaches and roadblocks in knowledge utilization in health services and public health.

Dr. Lyons received her university education at Dalhousie University (BA in psychology and sociology), Xavier University, Cincinnati (MEd in counselling psychology), the University of Oregon, Eugene (PhD in health studies – coping and adaptation and systems improvements in chronic disease management).
