The Black Health Education Collaborative is committed to improving Black health through education and research. Our mission is to address anti-Black racism and the interlocking systems that impact the health and wellbeing of Black communities across Canada through transforming medical and health professional education. We understand Black health and Black life as intricately connected to the places and spaces in which we live, work, love, play, worship and resist. We draw on long histories of community and academic scholarship and resistance from Black, critical race theory, queer, feminist, anti/decolonial traditions.

Reporting directly to the Director of the Black Health Education Collaborative, the position will support the development and implementation of a community-driven approach to education and research on anti-Black racism curriculum for students, faculty and practitioners (clinical and non-clinical) in medicine, public health and other health disciplines. Our ideal candidate is someone who cares deeply about disrupting anti-Black racism and eliminating health inequities experienced by Black communities.

This position will work collaboratively with other BHEC staff at the University of Toronto and Dalhousie University and with BHEC members in institutions across Canada.

SUMMARY OF DUTIES
• Provide research and program support for the development of innovative educational curriculum and research on anti-racism education, anti-racism pedagogy and anti-Black racism and health
• Assist with literature reviews, scans and synthesis of the peer-reviewed literature and grey literature
• Provide research and program support to internal and external working and advisory groups to deliver on BHEC priorities.
• Support evaluation and assessment activities for BHEC programs.
• Contribute to the writing and development of reports, manuscripts, abstracts and learning resources in other formats
• Performs other duties as required or assigned by the Director

QUALIFICATIONS:
• Ph.D. or Masters level Student
• Excellent research skills and experience
• Experience in meaningful engagement and research with Black communities is an asset
• Excellent interpersonal and relationship management skills
• Strong written and verbal communication skills
• Project coordination skills, including ability to set priorities and meet and adjust deadlines as appropriate
• Ability to contribute to a team environment that actively supports team wellbeing and joy at work
• Demonstrated commitment and aptitude for ongoing learning
